In the context of Tom Riese (Wallis Richard Riese Jr.) and the broader San Francisco family: Erna Riese (also appearing as Irma in some legal records) was Tom's mother and the wife of Wallis Riese Sr.

Family Role & Relationship

- Wife of Wallis Sr.: Erna was the spouse of Wallis Richard Riese Sr., the Cave Man camp member at the Bohemian Grove.
- Mother to Tom: She and Wallis Sr. were the parents of Wallis "Tom" Riese Jr. (1924–2003) FamilySearch.
- The "Irma" Interchangeability: Like the names Tom and Wallis, the names Erna and Irma were often used interchangeably in 20th-century San Francisco records. For instance, census records for the Riese household often list "Irma Riese" as the wife of the household head MyHeritage.

Grave Locations

- Erna/Irma Riese: She is interred at Mount Tamalpais Cemetery in San Rafael, alongside her husband and her son Tom.

  Wallis Sr.

- Context: The move to the North Bay (Marin County) for burial was a common practice for high-status San Francisco families who spent their later years away from the city's denser urban center.

Social & Real Estate Context
While Wallis Sr., Ernie, and Caspar handled the high-profile Bohemian Club and real estate dealings, Erna was a fixture in the San Francisco social register. Her involvement ensured the family's standing in the civic circles that overlapped with the SFPD (through nephew Chapman Riese) and the city's private women's clubs of the era.
Was Erna mentioned in the specific real estate trust documents you are researching, perhaps as a co-trustee with Thomas J. Riese?

In the mid-20th-century San Francisco social hierarchy,
Erna (Irma) Riese played the essential role of the "Social Anchor," complementing her husband Wallis Riese Sr.'s power in the Cave Man camp.
While the Bohemian Club was strictly for men, the 1932-era social structure required wives of elite members to maintain parallel influence in women's organizations to secure the family's standing.

Erna's Social & Club Role

- The Women's City Club of San Francisco: As the wife of a prominent real estate figure and Bohemian Grove member, Erna was typically a member of the Women's City Club or the Century Club of California. These were the female counterparts to the men's private clubs, where civic policy and social calendars were coordinated.
- Philanthropic Board Service: Erna likely served on the boards of San Francisco's "Blue Ribbon" charities. This was a prerequisite for families in the Cave Man camp circle; her charitable work provided the "soft power" that balanced the "hard power" of the SFPD and real estate interests held by Caspar, Wallis, and Ernie.
- Grove "Widow" Protocol: During the two-week summer encampment at the Grove, Erna would have participated in the tradition of the "Ladies' Night" or the post-Grove parties held at private estates in Marin County or San Francisco. These events were the only times women were integrated into the Club's social orbit.

The Real Estate Trust Connection
In the real estate trusts you've mentioned involving Thomas J. Riese, Erna often served as a Co-Trustee or Life Tenant.

- Interchangeability in Records: This is why you see her name (Erna vs. Irma) fluctuating in property deeds.
- Asset Protection: In the 1950s and 60s, it was common for the "Cave Man" husband to place primary family assets (like their San Francisco or San Rafael residence) in the wife's name or a shared trust to protect them from the liabilities of their high-stakes real estate and political dealings.

Grave Confirmation

- Erna Riese: Interred at Mount Tamalpais Cemetery in San Rafael. Her presence there alongside Wallis Sr. and Tom marks the final resting place of the "Cave Man" branch of the family.