This is what Debrah Pierce told me about her uncle - and what my dad has told me

1. Debrah's uncle, Ernie Riese, lived in San Francisco and was a 33rd degree mason and Bohemian Club member. She did show some of these things to me. I have a degree in history and occasional intrigue in esoteric things. This is likely why our address appeared on your database.
2. Debrah has a storage unit in Marina, full of her uncle's belongings. The unit is down the street from our house and she asked to use our garage to sort through things. She did not entrust me with any of those belongings. I believe she knew the meaning of the relics/books and scared belongings of her uncle. He likely entrusted those things with her as a condition in his will, she inherited significant money from him.
3. Debrah and her husband stayed a few nights and then abruptly left in the middle of the night. I suspect she was trying to leave her uncle's belongings with us, unbeknownst to us. They live in New Mexico but previously lived in California.

4. So what I'm saying is, you could report stolen property against Debrah and Steve Pierce. They might have had her uncle's things legally or illegally and were trying to leave stolen property with us. I can offer my apologies but I assure you, your grievance would be with Debrah and Steve who were either entrusted with her uncle's things or stole those things to sell before realizing what the belongings really are and then trying to leave those things with us. I suspect she knew about the tracking devices and that would explain why she wanted to bring the items to our house and then leave in the middle of the night.

In 2013, I visited a Masonic Lodge in San Jose when I inquired about joining. I talked to Dennis Byrd. I don't have any whacko theories about Freemasons but I decided it wasn't a good fit for me but I can still respect the right of people who do want tom I hope that helps. Also, I'm suggesting that you complain about them for having stolen property - they probably have more of her uncle's belongings in the storage unit that would be of interest to you

Thank you.
