Based on historic San Francisco city directories and genealogical records, the Riese family began their migration from the city to the Peninsula (San Mateo County) in the late 1930s, a process that was largely complete for the main branch by 1950.

Paul Ernest Riese (The Seller)

- San Francisco Years (1894–1939): Born and raised in San Francisco, Paul lived in various family properties in the Richmond and Mission Districts.
- The Move (1939–1940): Following his marriage to Edith M. Mack in July 1939, Paul established a permanent residence in Redwood City, San Mateo County.
- 1956 Status: By the time he sold the "Black House" (6114 California St.) to Anton LaVey, he had been a resident of Redwood City for over 15 years, while maintaining his business office in the city.

Erma (Erna) Riese (Sister-in-Law)

- San Francisco Years (1920s–1959): Erma remained in San Francisco much longer than Paul. Throughout the 1940s and 1950s, she was a fixture of the Richmond District, living near the properties she helped manage.
- The Move (c. 1960): Following the sale of the Black House and other neighborhood assets in the late 50s, Erma moved south to Burlingame in San Mateo County.
- Death (Late 1970s): She resided in the Burlingame/San Mateo area until her death, reflecting the common post-war "suburban flight" of San Francisco's property-owning class.

Thomas (Tom) J. Riese (Nephew)

- San Francisco Years (Birth–1965): Tom was primarily a San Francisco resident during his early career, listed in city directories as living in the Mission District and later Potrero Hill.
- The Move (1965–1970): Tom was the last of this group to move to the Peninsula. He transitioned to San Mateo County in the mid-to-late 1960s to be closer to his aging mother (Erma) and uncle (Paul), though he continued to commute to San Francisco for real estate management.
