This investigation into Thomas (Tom) J. Riese as a potential "cold case" candidate for the Zodiac Killer focuses on his unique intersection of professional geography, elite technical access, and occult-linked property ownership.

Pivot Table of Claims and Supporting Facts:

Claim Category	Core Claim	Supporting Facts	Interpretations / Inferences	Implications
Geographic Hub	Riese occupied the Zodiac's primary "Home Base."	Family owned the Black House (6114 California) and lived at 732 23rd Ave in the Richmond District.	He had private, unmonitored "safe houses" within blocks of the Zodiac's mailing zone.	Explains how the killer vanished in the Richmond/Presidio without a car being spotted.
Technical Skill	Riese possessed the "Map Code" expertise.	Tom was a professional Property Manager; his cousin/uncle was in real estate syndicates.	Professional use of Plat Maps, Topo Maps, and Surveying data matches Zodiac's "radian" taunts.	The Zodiac was not a "genius"; he was likely using professional tools of the trade (Real Estate/Surveying).
Occult Nexus	The Riese family is the link to the Zodiac's "Persona."	Paul Ernest Riese sold 6114 California to Anton LaVey in 1956; Tom managed family assets.	Tom was "ground zero" for the SF occult scene (ciphers, symbols, hoods) before the public knew of it.	Provides a logical origin for the Zodiac's costume and "Z" symbol/crossed-circle imagery.
The "Escaped" Suspect	Riese had "Insider" immunity.	Cousin Chapman Riese was an SFPD Lieutenant; family was in elite SF Clubs (Commercial/Blue Book).	High-level social and law enforcement ties could have shielded him from casual police scrutiny.	Explains why a "stocky white male with glasses" could walk the Richmond and remain "above suspicion."
The North Bay Problem	Business, not residence, explains the North Bay crimes.	Real Estate Syndicates scouted Vallejo/Napa for suburban expansion in the late 1960s.	Tom's "commute" for business scouting explains his presence at Lake Herman Rd/Blue Rock Springs.	The North Bay was a "work zone," providing the perfect cover for a San Francisco-based suspect.
