To investigate whether Thomas Riese's vehicle was cited near Washington and Cherry Streets in 1969, you must bypass modern digital tools and perform a manual search of physical archives. Parking citation data from this era is not digitized and is largely considered a historical record rather than active traffic court data.

Where to Find 1969 Parking Records

1. San Francisco Police Department Records (1870–1983): Historical SFPD records, including many Bureau of Photography accident and incident files from 1931–1969, are held at the San Francisco Public Library (SFPL) History Center. This collection (SFH 61) is the most likely location for paper logs or microfilm containing citation data.
2. SFMTA Photo Archive: The SFMTA Photo Archive contains over 200,000 images, including street views and infrastructure from 1903 to the present. If Riese's car was involved in a minor incident or photographed near a "No Parking" zone in the Richmond/Presidio area, it could appear in these visual records.
3. San Francisco City Hall, Room 190: The Office of the Assessor-Recorder holds official records recorded prior to January 1, 1990. While they primarily handle property deeds, any administrative liens resulting from unpaid citations in 1969 would be indexed here.

Document Checklist for Investigation

- SFPD Citation Logs: Request to view Series 6 of the SFPD records at the SFPL History Center (requires 48-hour advance notice).
- NextRequest (Public Records): Submit a formal Public Records Request to the SFMTA for "historical parking citation summary data" for the months of September and October 1969 in the Presidio Heights area.
- DMV Microfilm: As previously noted, use DMV Form INF 70 to get the specific license plate number for Riese's 1969 vehicle so you can search for that specific plate in the logs.

The "Zodiac" Strategic Value

Investigators believe the Zodiac may have used the weeks prior to the Stine murder to "scout" the area. A parking ticket for a dark-colored sedan registered to Thomas Riese on Washington or Cherry Street in late September or early October 1969 would be a massive forensic link, placing him at the exact crime scene during his suspected scouting phase.
