To investigate whether Frederick (Fred) Riese's probate inventory contains the "smoking gun" links to North Bay land, you must look beyond standard family deeds and into the records of the Riese family real estate syndicate.

1. The Syndicate's North Bay Footprint:
In the 1940s and 1950s, San Francisco investment syndicates often acquired large "raw land" tracts in Solano and Napa counties before they were subdivided formally for the post-war housing boom.

- The "Paper" Trail: Because Frederick Riese was part of a partnership (likely with his brother Paul Ernest), these holdings were often recorded under Limited Partnership names or "shell" entities like "Riese & Co." or "Golden Gate Land Associates."
- Probate Inventory: If Fred died in the mid-1950s, his Inventory and Appraisal at the San Francisco Superior Court would list his "interest in a partnership" as a single line item. To find the specific North Bay land, you must then locate the Partnership Agreement or Tax Filings for that specific entity.

2. Tom Riese's Inherited "Work Zone":
Following Fred's death, Thomas (Tom) J. Riese transitioned into a management role for these inherited assets.

- Strategic Access: If the Riese syndicate owned land near Lake Herman Road or Blue Rock Springs, Tom would have had a legitimate professional reason to be in those isolated "lovers' lane" areas during the late 1960s—scouting boundaries, checking for illegal dumping, or meeting with surveyors.
- Professional "Cover": This explains why a San Francisco resident would be present in Vallejo or Benicia at night. His knowledge of these "raw" tracts would have been elite, involving the use of Topographic Maps and property markers that match the Zodiac's geographic precision.

3. How to Execute the Search:
To find these specific links, an investigator should focus on:

- Search for "Riese" in Solano/Napa Indexes: Check the Grantor/Grantee Indexes at the Solano County Recorder for any land transfers involving "Riese" or "Riese & Co." between 1945 and 1970.
- The "Kaufman & Broad" Connection: Many SF syndicates sold their scouted land to major developers like Kaufman & Broad or Stoneson Brothers in the late 60s. Look for deeds showing a Riese entity selling land to these firms in the North Bay.
- Tax Liens: Search for any County Tax Liens filed against Riese family members in the North Bay, which would confirm their ownership of specific parcels during the Zodiac years.

Target Data	Record Source	Investigative Value
Fred Riese's Inventory	SF Superior Court (Probate)	Identifies the specific business entities he owned.
Partnership Agreements	Secretary of State (Business Search)	Links Fred/Tom Riese to specific land-holding corps.
Solano/Napa Deeds	County Recorder's Offices	Proves the family owned land at the exact sites of the murders.