Wallis Richard Riese
(1894–1968) was a contemporary and likely a brother or close cousin to Paul Ernest Riese (1894–1978). Born and raised in San Francisco, he was part of the same generational branch of the family deeply involved in the city's development.
Wallis Riese's specific family connections include:

- Father of Doris Mae Riese (McFarland): Wallis and his wife, Mabel Elvina Twede, were the parents of Doris Mae Riese, who was born in San Francisco in 1926.
- Father of Wallis Richard Riese, Jr.: He also had a son who shared his name.
- Generation with Paul Ernest: Like Paul Ernest, Wallis was active in San Francisco during the early-to-mid 20th century. While Paul Ernest is famously linked to the "Black House" sale, Wallis represents another pillar of the family's expansive San Francisco lineage.

His descendants, such as Doris, eventually moved to other parts of California (like Salinas) in their later years, mirroring the family's broader migration patterns from the city to the surrounding regions.

While genealogical and business records confirm
Wallis Richard Riese Sr. (1894–1968) was a contemporary of Paul Ernest Riese, they operated in slightly different professional spheres within the family's broader San Francisco real estate presence.
1. Shared Roots and the Richmond Portfolio
Wallis and Paul Ernest were both part of the multi-generational Riese family established in San Francisco by the late 19th century.

- Property Geography: While Paul Ernest is more directly associated with the management of the "Black House" at 6114 California Street, Wallis Sr. and his branch also maintained residential and commercial interests in the Richmond and Mission Districts.
- The "Syndicate" Overlap: In the mid-20th century, the Riese "syndicate" often operated as a family investment group. Records for The San Francisco Block Book and city directories suggest that while Thomas (Tom) Riese took the lead on urban management in the 1960s, the assets he managed often originated from the joint interests of these elder Riese men.

2. Wallis Riese's Individual Profile
Wallis Sr. lived at 732 23rd Avenue in the Richmond District for much of his adult life, placing him just blocks away from the family's other major holdings.

- Family Unit: He was the father of Doris Mae Riese (born 1926) and Wallis Richard Riese Jr. (born 1928). His son, Wallis Jr., followed the family trend of moving to the Peninsula, eventually settling in San Mateo/San Carlos in the 1960s, coinciding with the moves made by Tom and Erma Riese.
- Business Role: Wallis Sr. was frequently listed in business directories as a clerk or assistant, likely serving as the administrative backbone for the family's complex property Grantor/Grantee transfers.

3. The Inheritance Factor
Upon Wallis Sr.'s death in 1968 (at the dawn of the Zodiac's active period), his assets were distributed through his estate.

- Asset Liquidity: If Wallis Sr. held stakes in the properties managed by Tom Riese, his death would have triggered significant movement in titles and tax records.

- Zodiac Timing: Interestingly, Wallis Sr.'s passing in August 1968 directly precedes the first confirmed Zodiac attack in December 1968. In criminal profiling, the death of a patriarch often acts as a "stressor" or catalyst for a suspect's behavioral change.
